The bruise, which they had seen for themselves was excessively small, was very likely caused, as suggested by Dr. Marques, from falling against some hard object. The character of the first witness called was such as to warrant them in once disbelieving his statement. He had said that he had never been convioted of gambling, and when pressed had admitted that only a week or two before he had been fined two dollars for cambling, on the information of one of the constables against whom he was then giving evidence. From the relative positions which this witness had pointed out as being occupied at the time of the occurrence by deceased and himself, and the variance of his statements

TERRIBLE DISASTER TO A SYDNET EXCURSION

SYDNEY, 21st June.

A terrible railway accident occurred on the Homebush-Waratah line to-day, the day observed as one of rejoicing in honour of the Queen's Jubilee, resulting in a lamentable destruction of life and property. An excursion train which left Sydney at 10.25 s.m. for the Hawkesbury River collided with some contractor's trucks on an unfinished portion of the line at Peat's Ferry at about half-past 2, with the result that fearful injury was wrought to life and limb, and considerable damage done to rolling stock. When the train left Redfern about 400 excursionists, who were bent upon enjoying themselves on the Hawkesbury. Everything appears to have gone smoothly until Ryde was reached, and there it was thought by many of those who were in the train that the engine was not sufficiently strong to draw the train which consisted of nine carriages, exclusive of the locomotive, up some steep gradients. Two of the carriages were left behind at Beecroft, and the train then proceeded as far as Hornsby; and likely that he will adopt General Boulanger's having arrived at this place, the engine was deplan for a mobilisation trial. He is one of the tached, and sent back to pick up the care that had been left behind. After a while they reached the station at Hornsby, and at that place the train was, to use a railway term, " made up." i.e., the two sections of the train were joined together proparatory to starting for the terminal point of the railway at the Hawkesbury. Everything being ready, the train, which was then very late, moved out of the Hornsby station towards Peat's Ministers yesterday did not present them-Ferry, and presently reached a point from which there is a steep descent towards the river. Here each appearance. M. Rouvier, the President the train began to move along at a greatly increased speed, and as it emerged from a tunnel the driver appeared to have lost all control over it. By the official account of the socident the causes is ascribed to the failure of the Westinghouse air brake; but another idea is that the engine was much too light for either drawing the train up, or properly regulating its speed down, a steep gradient. The driver evidently knew that some disaster-was likely to ith continuously. The train oscillated violently, seemed inevitable. At one point it is asserted that the train attained a velocity of something like 70 miles an hour. It is said that the driver made a gallant attempt to save his charge from utter rmin by reversing his engine, but it was all too late, for no human agency could withstand the frightful rush of the carriages as they swept on and on to apparent destruction. It is said that the guard put on the brakes, but that for various reasons they proved to be completely powerless, and the train sped down the incline with a thundering clatter and a dreadful rush. Before it reached the Peat's Ferry station, however, a pointsman or porter in the employ of the Government rushed to the points, and, holding to them bravely, managed to "throw" the train on to a siding on which were two contractors trucks and an engine. It was exceedingly fortunate that this pointsman had the presence of mind to set as he did, otherwise the engine and the whole of the cars attached to it would in all trucks, which were standing there, with tarrific force, and almost in an instant the first and second carriages were "telescoped" and shricks

Henry Hankin a clerk in the Railway Stores Department, died from the effects of internal injuries soon after his admission into the Sydney Hospital. In addition to this list of killed, a large number of passengers were injured. some of them very seriously. A searching inquiry is to be made into the circumstances of the disaster, with a view to ascertain exactly the cause or causes which led to its occurrence.
